Introduction by the 14th Shamar Rinpoche

Buddha Shakyamuni gave the 35 Buddhas Sutra as the most effective and expedient method for purifying negativities and accumulating merit. The practice was very widespread in Buddhist India, especially during the time when the Mahayana and Vajrayana — the paths of the Bodhisattva — were flourishing there. Many Buddhists — yogis of the tantric lineages, scholars in Nalanda University, monks and nuns, householder practitioners — chose this sutra among all of the available Mahayana sutras and tantras as their preliminary practice or daily practice. Indeed, the great Tibetan master Marpa Lhodrakpa and a number of his peers chose it as their preliminary practice before focusing on the advanced practices of the Vajrayana.

The 35 Buddhas Sutra, also called the Daily Confession in Three Sets, or Arya Triskandhaka Sutra, is particularly timely for today's practitioners. The Buddha himself taught it in Shravasti; it belongs to his second cycle of teachings. A pure, authentic, and non-sectarian transmission, it is unsullied by controversy or partisanship on any level. A vehicle of great blessing, it is appropriate for beginning and advanced practitioners alike.

The text presented in this book provides a comprehensive practice text based on the 35 Buddhas Sutra. In addition to the sutra text itself, the book also includes the mandala offering (present in many Mahayana sutras and tantras), as well as other selected prayers from different sources. For example, the Bodhisattva vow is from Shantideva, the invitation and dedication are from the sutras, and the last four verses of the text are a traditional prayer recited by lamas throughout Tibet. The intent of this book is to provide a complete text suitable for daily practice by a wide variety of students of all lineages.

Those who wish to practice this sutra should receive explanations from an authentic teacher of their lineage. While it is possible to begin the practice and familiarize oneself with it without having received them, one cannot truly approach the heart of the practice nor receive its full blessing until the explanations and reading transmission have been requested and obtained. As a sutra practice, it does not focus on a tutelary deity (yidam) from the tantras, and therefore there is no corresponding empowerment (wang).

The 35 Buddhas Sutra Practice can be practiced individually or with a group. It can be recited occasionally, daily, or as a preliminary practice (ngöndro). Here, confession and prostrations are done before the 35 Buddhas, and the mandala offering is also incorporated into the practice. In the context of the preliminary practices, prostrations and the mandala offering would be followed by the Vajrasattva purification practice and finally the Guru Yoga with Avalokiteshvara, or Chenrezi — the great Bodhisattva of compassion — as the basis for developing devotion and reinforcing our connection with enlightenment.

In former times, many great practitioners, retreatants, and lay people have benefited greatly from the 35 Buddhas Sutra. Today also, many benefits will be obtained by relying on this practice of the great masters of the past. The efforts of sincere practitioners will be rewarded by success in their chosen practice. Practitioners will be protected from life-threatening obstacles and from karmic mistakes and hindrances. The negative karma of body, speech, and mind will be purified. Well-being and happiness will be experienced spontaneously. For all of these reasons, I have chosen to revive this precious practice and make it a standard in Bodhi Path centers throughout the world. The Bodhi Path curriculum offers a variety of main paths of practice to suit the needs and inspiration of different practitioners. The 35 Buddhas Sutra Practice is an appropriate starting point for all of these paths. After completion of at least 10,000 prostrations to the Buddhas and 10,000 mandala offerings, students may receive teachings on many of the other practices belonging to the Bodhi Path curriculum, or they may choose to continue to focus on this as their main practice.

The 35 Buddhas prostrations and mandala offerings may also be undertaken as preliminary practices (ngöndro) that precede more advanced Vajrayana practices, although there are other options for preliminary practice too. For example, practitioners who follow the Kagyu Mahamudra path can choose to begin with this 35 Buddhas Sutra Practice or the Tsoknyi Zungjuk, the Union of the Two Accumulations practice previously compiled by me and based on the instructions of Mikyo Dorje, the 8th Karmapa, as contained in his book Dhag gyu Dragyen. Those who are committed to the Karma Kagyu Mahamudra Path can choose between the 35 Buddhas practice and the Mahamudra Preliminaries as taught by Wangchuk Dorje, the 9th Karmapa. In any case, as a preliminary practice, students must complete 100,000 prostrations and 100,000 mandala offerings, as well as 100,000 Vajrasattva purification mantras and Guru Yoga recitations.

When we confess all of our negativities in front of the 35 Buddhas, confidence in the power of the practice is of paramount importance. Just as all negative actions leave an imprint in the mindstream that blocks positive karma from ripening and reinforces the illusion of samsara, the merit generated by this practice blocks negative karma from ripening and sets us firmly on the path to liberation.

When we train in offering mandalas, we are replacing our impure universe with pure manifestation. We offer everything that is described in the text, from the most precious things that beings could possibly desire to divine paradises that encourage Buddhas to benefit beings. Because space is boundless, we can mentally fill it with our offerings to the Buddhas. In this case, we are the creators, and instead of creating worldly pleasures and fostering desire, we are creating excellent conditions that help Buddhas in their efforts to liberate beings. If we have a mandala base, we wipe it clean of any dust as we recite the hundred syllable mantra, we imagine that all of the misdeeds and veils accumulated in the mindstreams of ourselves and others due to dualistic clinging have been completely purified. Then, while visualizing the field of refuge (the Buddhas surrounded by Bodhisattvas, Pratyekabuddhas, Arhats, and so on), we perform the 37-point mandala offering, followed by the short verse beginning with "Sashi Pochu". We make heaps of flowers, rice, etc., bearing in mind the meaning of the words. Whether we are accumulating offerings or not, and whether our offering is extensive or abridged, we evoke the 37-point mandala visualization along with other splendid pure realms and imagine that we offer them all.

觀想福田聖眾海會面前 獻以三十七曼達供 並以四句“曼達供偈”頌次為數 於觀想完美宇宙間此三十七種勝妙供物時 可略可廣 亦可於此之上 觀想將各個佛淨土 同樣上供 行者首先手持曼達盤 拭抹其上之塵埃 同時觀想自己及眾生識流中因能 所二取習氣所積諸種惡障 同被清除 其後念誦百字明咒 誦咒時 應專注於其表詮之義 敬備花瓣 紅花米 半寶石及其他供物 如法作供
